

Experience in splicing ribbon optical cables

Overview

This course covers how to successfully splice the two most common fibre types (900um and 250um), as well as the various issues that may occur and how to solve them. Students will begin the day by performing basic splices before advancing onto pigtail splicing and joint. While traditional fiber optic cables contain individual fibers encased in a protective jacket, ribbon fiber cables organize fiber optic strands in a flat ribbon structure, creating freedom with space conservation and cable management. Of course, this ribbon structure also allows for faster and less. Ribbon cable can be spliced more rapidly by using mass fusion splicing technique. Compared to traditional single-fiber splicing, ribbonizing significantly reduces time and labor. While ribbon splicing is not a new technology—it dates back to the 1980s—it is experiencing a resurgence as data centre interconnects increasingly use high-fibre-count ribbon cables.
